

REFERENCES:

EMBRACING WATERS: holding, hope, and healing for Jewish Survivors of Abuse

1. Courtois, C, & Ford, J, Editors; Treating Complex Traumatic Stress Disorders, Guildford Press, 2009.
2. Frank, JD, Persuasion and Healing; Schocken Books, 1963.
3. Golding, R., & Schwartz, RC; The Mosaic Mind: Empowering the Tormented Selves of Child Abuse Survivors; WW. Norton, 1995.
4. Graetz, N; Silence is Deadly; Judaism Confronts Wifebeating; Jason Aaronson Press, 1998.
5. Herman, J; Trauma and Recovery; Basic Books, 1992.
6. Klem, Y; No Ordinary Bath; The Use of Mikveh in Healing from Incest; Ritualwell.org
7. Musleah, R, "Surviving Abuse," Jewish Woman, Spring, 2003; pp. 187-192.
8. Olitzsky, KM, Judson, D, The Rituals and Practices of a Jewish Life, Jewish Lights Publishing; 2002.
9. Rando, T; "Creating Therapeutic Rituals in the Psychotherapy of the Bereaved," Psychotherapy; Volume 22/Summer 1985/Number 2; pp.236-240.
10. Wyrostok, N; "The Ritual as a Psychotherapeutic Intervention," Psychotherapy, Volume 23/Fall 1995/Number 3; pp. 397-404.
11. Yassen, J; "Preventing Secondary Traumatic Stress Disorder," Figley, C, Editor; Compassion Fatigue: Coping with Secondary Traumatic Stress in those who Treat the Traumatized, Bruner/Mazel; 1995; pp.178-208.